

Author | Mentor | Speaker

Betty-Ann Heggie

Betty-Ann Heggie spent 26 highly successful years in the corporate world retiring from her position as Senior Vice President of Potash Corp in 2007. Betty-Ann now serves as a corporate director, a professional speaker and blogger for Huffington Post. She founded and is actively involved in the Betty Ann Heggie Womensorship program at the University of Saskatchewan's Edwards School of Business which is aimed at getting more women to the decision-making table. More than 1800 women have participated in the program's networking events, professional development and its annual women's film festival.

During her career she was named the top investor relations person in Canada twice: once by her clients and once by her peers. She was also inducted into the Hall of Fame of Canada's Top 100 Most Powerful Women and received the Queen's Golden Jubilee medal, the YWCA Lifetime Achievement Award, the University of Saskatchewan Alumni Award for Mentorship, the Stevie Award for 'Women Helping Women' and was the recipient of the 2015 Trailblazer Award from Women in Mining Canada. She has served on the boards of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and Allana Potash. She currently serves on the board of TIFF. A graduate of the University of Saskatchewan, Betty-Ann has also completed the Senior Executive Program at the Columbia Business School in New York.

She and her husband have two highly spirited adult daughters.

“While Betty-Ann’s speech may only last a few minutes, her impact on your audience will last forever.”

"A thought leader in gender physics and mentorship."

	/BettyAnnHeggieWomensorship
	@BettyAnnHeggie
	http://linkd.in/1gELetY
	baheggie@bettyannheggie.com

"She helps women step into their energy and stand tall."

"Delivers Powerful Words of Wisdom as a Speaker."

www.bettyannheggie.com